What To Do With Your Experience?

Over the summer, you've likely learned skills of many different things:

- Time management,
- Gardening techniques
- Food justice
- Community organizing and engagement.

These are applicable skills to many circumstances or activities.

If you choose to help out or lead events and work at the garden over the school year, you will be able to share your experience and knowledge with others. If you choose to apply your experience elsewhere, you might find that practices developed in the garden, like teamwork and patience, may help in many future circumstances. Thanks so much for your help in creating the garden this summer!
